and Lungs, and let me say to anyone wanting such a medicine—
German Syrup is the best.

B.W. Baldwin, Carnesville, Tenn.,

best medicine I ever tried for coughs and colds. I recommend it to everyone for these troubles.

R. Schmalhausen, Druggist, of scores of prescriptions and preparations I had on my files and shelves, which had settled on my lungs, I tried your German Syrup. It gave

LACRYME RERUM.

O, Time and Change, they range and range
From sunshine round to thunder!
They glance and go as the great winds blow,
And the best of our dreams drive asunder:
For Time and Change estrange, estrange—
And now they have looked and seen us, O we that were dear, we are all too near
With the thick and the world between us.

O, Death and Time, they chime and chime
Like bells at sunset falling!
They end the song, they right the wrong.
They set the old echoes calling:
For Death and Time bring on the prime
Of God's own chosen weather.
And we lie in the peace of the Great Release
As once in the grass together.

A PRACTICAL JOKER.

Some of Perkins' Harmless but Amusing Tricks Which He Perpetrates.

Perkins is tall, angular and a practical joker of the severest type. One of his peculiar peculiarities is to suddenly halt a strange, pompous individual on the street, buttonhole him and remark with cool assumption:

"I beg your pardon, sir, but I think you have made a mistake."

"What is that, sir?" the victim is likely to ask.

"Well," Perkins will reply with the utmost audacity, "this city does not belong to any one man or set of men. You may think you own it, but you don't."

See?" and Perkins will hurry away, leaving the pompous man to his own reflections.

Sometimes he varies this interesting performance in this highly original fashion: Stepping up to a total stranger he will beg for a light for his cigarette.
This trifling favor having been extended,
he will engage the victim in conversation for a moment. When another stranger appears Perkins halts him: As he approaches Perkins introduces him to the first man.

"Ah, Mr. Smith, permit me to present
you to my friend, Mr. Brown. Mr.
Brown, Mr. Smith."

Of course the men shake hands and Perkins takes his departure, leaving the strangers to extricate themselves from their embarrassment as best they can.

One day Perkins entered a small east side dry goods store with a friend.
Ranged in front of the counter were a row of stools. Upon these the mem-bered themselves. In a moment a dapper young clerk came up and asked Perkins what he desired. For an instant he seemed puzzled for a reply, but soon his eyes rested upon the familiar sign "If you don't see what you want ask for it."
That furnished him with a cue.

"Well," he said in measured tones,
"you can bring me a plate of corned beef
hash, nicely browned, with two poached
eggs on top; also a cup of hot coffee.
What's yours, George?" he added, turning to his friend.

"Gimme the same," he responded.
All the girls in the store stared hard at the impudent fellows, and the clerk's eyes began to bulge.

"Gentlemen," he replied, with a show of calmness, "you have made a slight mistake; this is a dry goods store and not a restaurant. Do I look like a waiter?"

"I am not here to answer questions, young man," said Perkins, as with his friend he rose and moved toward the door, "but if you can't fill orders you'd better go out of the business or take in your sign."

And the jokers vanished out the door.
Perkins is still at large.—New York Herald.

A Pretty Garden Ornament.

A very pretty piece of ornamental gardening, not too difficult for beginners, can be done with an old umbrella or parasol and some plants of cypress vines, maurandia, sweet pea or anything that is not of too aspiring a nature. Such climbers as the morning glory, canary bird vine and other twenty footers, are better left for unsightly fences and buildings. Plants are better than seed, because more certain, and they do not take so long to catch the knack of twining and spreading. Umbrella ribs are not decorative, and to see such an object standing there week after week, waiting for its clothes, does not give people a pleasant impression of a garden.

But first find your umbrella; and this may not be so easy, for "retired" umbrellas that are no longer fit for use are seldom seen. Some member of the family, however, may be able to produce one, and then it should be immediately stripped of the few tatters left to it.
The next step is to paint the frame and handle brown, and when quite dry plant
the end of the handle firmly in the ground, with the frame fully opened.
If the handle is rather short it will be an improvement to add a piece of wood to it.

It is now ready for the vines, which should have made some progress in growing; and when they once begin to do their best the old umbrella frame makes such a lovely green bower studded with blossoms of red or purple or white—or all together if the vines are mixed—that every one exclaims over its beauty.

A parasol with the same treatment is equally pretty on a smaller scale, and it would be very ornamental in the center of a round bed edged with bright colored phlox or candytuft. With a long spouted watering pot the vines could have a daily drenching in warm weather, when the sun is not shining on them, from their roots to their highest green tips,
and this would keep them fresh.—Harper's Young People.

VIOLATING THE INTERSTATE COMMERCE ACT.

The California papers are discussing the discovery made by the Record-Union that the President and his traveling companions in their tour across the Continent, violated the provision of the Interstate Commerce Act, which prohibits, under $5,000 penalty, any railroad company from granting a pass over its road across State lines. The Presidential party consisted of ten persons and it passed through twenty-four States and Territories. If passes were formally issued to each it would constitute two hundred and forty distinct violations of the law, and the penalties would aggregate $1,200,000. The Record-Union wishes to know whether the law will be enforced in this case as it would be if passes had been granted to some poor persons needing assistance from one station to another across a State line.

As the members of the Presidential party were nearly all officials, receiving high salaries from the people and amply able to pay their way, it would be interesting to ascertain what the opinion of the Interstate Commerce Commission is in their case, and if railroads are amenable to the Interstate Commerce law only when they issue passes across State lines to private citizens.

THE HUNT ASSASSINATION.

The troops stationed at Walla Walla, Washington, lynched a citizen named A. J. Hunt to avenge the death of one of their comrades. The War Department, at the instance of the citizens, ordered a thorough investigation of the affair, with instructions to the officers to spare neither time nor expense in bringing the offenders to justice. The civil authorities, too, went to work with a will, and secured sufficient evidence to warrant the Grand Jury in finding indictments against five of the soldiers. Now it is learned that one of the soldiers, who is under indictment for murder, has turned State's evidence, and that his testimony, which has been taken by the District Attorney, implicates more soldiers than have been indicted or arrested. The soldiers have been informed of the confession, and the civil authorities have taken precautions against the possibility of an attack on the jail by putting fifty men on guard.

THE OHIO FARMERS.

The Columbus, Ohio, convention decided by a vote of 64 to 63, to not organize a third party at present. No one was more surprised at the result than the leaders of the opposition to an independent State ticket.

It is stated that this action by no means takes the Ohio farmers out of politics. It is still probable that many of the counties, and perhaps some of the Senatorial Districts, may nominate a farmers' ticket. Even when the farmers endorse old party candidates it will in many instances be upon a pledge from the candidate to pursue a course agreeable to the farmers.

There will be a determined effort among the agricultural classes to defeat the reelection of Senator Sherman, and to that end no effort will be spared to capture the balance of power in the Legislature.

A GENERAL HOLIDAY.

Yesterday was observed as a holiday in all parts of the country. Business was suspended in many of the large cities and the graves of citizens as well as soldiers were decorated. In many places Union and Confederate soldiers participated side by side in the exercises, and proved that the war is over. In New York City many prominent Confederates were the guests of Grand Army Posts, and ex-Governor Wise, of Virginia, delivered an eloquent oration. Impressive ceremonies were held at the tomb of General Grant, the character of which denoted that the admonition "Let us have peace," had been heeded by every one worthy of the honor of being an American citizen.

There are twenty-six monarchies and twenty-five republics in the civilized world to-day. Sixteen republics are in South America.

PHILADELPHIA, May 30.—In the course of his address to-day in response to the Mayor's speech of welcome, President Harrison said: "I have never been able to think of to-day as one of mourning. I have never quite been able to feel that half-masted flags were appropriate on Decoration Day. I have rather felt that flags should be at the peak, because those whose dying we commemorate rejoiced at seeing it where their valor placed it. We honor them in joyous, thankful, triumphant commemoration of what they did. We mourn for them as comrades from whom we have departed, but we feel the glory of their dying, and the glory of their achievement covers all our great land and has set them in an imperishable roll of honor."

Accident at a Celebration. Special to the Journal.

LANCING, Mich., May 30.—A feature of Memorial Day parade this morning was a float, on which rode forty-three women, to represent the States of the Union. Near the cemetery the platform gave way. Wm. Hardy fell under the horses' heels, frightening them into a run. The women hung screaming to the float until thrown off along for two or three blocks. The last one fell off just as the cemetery was reached, where the horses stopped. Hardy was badly injured, and about fifteen of the women slightly bruised, but none severely.

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 10, 1887.

Messrs. F. J. Cheney & Co.—Gentlemen;—I have been in the general practice of medicine for most 40 years, and would say that in all my practice and experience have never seen a preparation that I could prescribe with as much confidence of success as I can Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by you. Have prescribed it a great many times and its effect is wonderful, and would say in conclusion that I have yet to find a case of Catarrh that it would not cure, if they would take it according to directions. Yours truly,

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. Distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels, are some of the more common symptoms. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet surely and efficiently. It tones the stomach and other organs, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, and by thus overcoming the local symptoms removes the sympathetic effects of the disease, banishes the headache, and refreshes the tired mind.

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness, or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble, I think, was aggravated by my business, which is that of a painter, and from being more or less shut up in a room with fresh paint. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla—took three bottles. It did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced."

MEMORIAL DAY.

The Procession and Exercises Yesterday.

Flags floated at half-mast on the Court House and other buildings yesterday morning as a mark of respect for the memory of the men who died that the nation might live. The banks, Postoffice and stores were closed, and at the appointed hour the Veterans from their Post, the Reno Guards and University Cadets from their Armories, the Patriarche Militant, I. O. O. F., Uniform Rank, K. of P., from their Lodges, Rebekah Degree Lodge, I. O. O. F., Reno Cornet Band and citizens from town and country assembled on foot and in carriages and formed in line on the park grounds in front of the Riverside Hotel. Promptly at the appointed time A. A. Evans, Grand Marshal of the Day, ordered the column forward, and

AT THE CEMETERY.

Upon arrival at the cemetery the order "break ranks" was given by the Marshal, the band played, and Dr. Lewis, President of the Day, made appropriate remarks, and Rev. Mr. Magill made an appropriate prayer. The G. A. R. services were conducted by General O. M. Mitchell Post, and the graves of comrades were strewn with flowers. Many citizens also decorated the graves of loved ones, and the cemetery resembled a flower garden.

As the atmosphere was chilling and the clouds threatening, President Lewis announced that the literary exercises, which were to take place at the cemetery, would be postponed until 7:30 p. m. at the Opera House.

Post Commander Lucas detailed a squad of the G. A. R. to decorate graves in the Masonic and Odd Fellows' Cemetery, and the various organizations repaired to their several quarters and the citizens dispersed.

AT THE OPERA HOUSE.

Last evening the exercises, which were postponed at the cemetery in consequence of the inclemency of the weather, were conducted at the Opera House, where a large audience assembled. The band played inspiring airs, after which President Lewis called the meeting to order and appropriately referred to the occasion; the Chaplain, Rev. Mr. Fisher, prayed, the choir composed of Mrs. W. S. Bender, Miss Grace Wasson, and Messrs. R. W. and G. Parry sang "Cover Them Over" with organ accompaniment by Miss Quaffe, after which the President introduced Hon. T. V. Julien, who delivered the following oration:

Fellow citizens and soldiers of the Grand Army.—In a land of political equality and civil liberty, a country where every well behaved citizen is an acknowledged sovereign, and there alone, can exist a day such as we have here assembled to celebrate. No other people on earth can appreciate the sentiment that brought into existence this national holiday; hence we have often been told by our European neighbors of the dire results that would surely follow its continued observance. They know not, as do we, that it is the legitimate outgrowth of patriotism, love of country and gratitude to martial heroes. We appreciate, and love to honor the brave men who fought for our liberties.

Other countries that stand abreast with our own in the tide of Christianity and civilization know not the spirit which brought into existence or prompts the continuance of Memorial Day. Among the soldiers of this Republic, from the richly caparisoned General to the blouse-covered private, no class is known. Each fills his allotted station and receives his martial reward. How different in the Old World. There the common soldier, who perils his life in defense of his country and falls upon the field of battle, or dies of wounds or disease in the hospitals, is laid to rest with as little ceremony as possible, and is soon forgotten. If he survives, and obtains an honorable discharge, though maimed and broken in health, a meager pension which enables him to eke out a miserable existence is the only recognition vouchsafed to him, and his final resting place, unmarked by monument, or "storied urn" is forever neglected; while the officer in command, who gives his orders at a safe distance from the conflict, is retired on half pay, and spends the remainder of his life in luxury and ease, and is given a final resting place among kings, princes and statesmen. Our nation provides for its soldiers while living and honors them when dead; of which our pension roll and the sacred observance of this day is convincing proof.

Murmurings of discontent at the present and increasing size of our pension roll, if any there be, comes from those who have forgotten the past. While it was not my fortune to be an active participant in the late civil war, I was old enough to be familiar with the scenes then enacted. Well do I remember the urgent appeal for volunteers, when the life of the nation hung in the balance. Well do I remember promises everywhere made by statesmen, soldiers and orators to those who, for the moment, halted between duty to their family and that of their country. And right well do I remember the solemn compact then entered into between this nation and the soldier, who with unspeakable, immeasurable courage and patriotism, forsaking home and family in answer to such appeals, offered his life a ransom for his country. It was that whatever fortune might befall the soldier, the faith of this nation is forever firmly, solemnly and irrevocably pledged not grudgingly, but to cheerfully and amply provide for that soldier and his loved ones.

My fellow citizens, that solemn compact, doubly sacred by reason of the circumstances which surrounded its making, shall never be broken while a citizen lives to ensure the beneficence of a government it was a means of saving. A hundred millions annually paid to pensioners! What of that? Would any of us realize this if not informed of the fact? What portion of the vast sum does the most wealthy and prosperous among us pay? The amount is so small, and the means of payment so easy, that he knows not how or when. The bulk of this vast sum comes from those who bank in the sunshine of prosperity, and finds its way into the hands of the aged and decrepit soldier, whose valor in the bloom of manhood, rescued from threatened oblivion, and may God grant, made everlasting, a government that guards and protects the home and fortune of the rich and the poor alike.

In the continuation and perpetuation of Memorial Day we not alone make manifest our gratitude to the defenders of our country, living or dead, but are performing the patriotic duty of keeping alive in the hearts of the American people that spirit of devotion to country, which call forth an instantaneous response at the first faint sound of alarm; a striking illustration of which was given a few days since when "The Pained Knight" of the American Cabinet was deluged with a storm of telegraphic approvals from all over the land in response to his brilliant, fearless, yet dignified answers to the haughty demands of the Italian Premier succeeding the recall of Fava. Those spontaneous flashings of encouragement, coming as they did, from all classes and from all sections of this country, South, East, West and North, and so soon after the close of our own internecine troubles, swelled the breast and quickened the heart-throb of every American citizen, and ought to be a sufficient warning to all the world that, so long as this spirit of loyalty abounds, it is unsafe to trifle with the American eagle. May our interest in the observance of Memorial day grow stronger and the spirit it inculcates brighter, as the nation grows older, firmer and better. May each Decoration Day ceremony be a seed dropped in the heart of every boy to spring up hereafter a full-armed soldier for Liberty and Union. The occasion will afford all an opportunity to pause for a moment and reflect upon the duty of each as an integral part of a great and glorious country, and while contemplating the self-sacrifice of those whose graves they decorate, be the better prepared to perform that most difficult of all duties, self-denial.

And now my friends, as we go forth at each succeeding year to perform the "Labor of love," for which this day is sacredly dedicated, let us do so with "charity for all and with malice toward none." Whether they wore the blue or the gray, let us believe that they all went forth at what they believed the call of duty. Let us bury our animosities in the grave and forgive the living who mingle their tears with ours at the tomb of the loved and lost.

Mr. Julien's address was well received, and when the applause ceased the band played and the choir sang. President Lewis next introduced Hon. William Webster, who, after a few explanatory remarks, delivered the following

LEARNED AND ELOQUENT ADDRESS:

Mr. President, Veterans of O. M. Mitchell Post, Grand Army of the Republic and Others.—This beautiful day, is consecrated by the love and devotion of a united and happy people to the memory of those, who, with willing hearts and strong hands, went to the front when danger was imminent and destruction at hand. When the passions of men were on fire, and their unalloyed ambitions by unmeasured power, had swept our devoted country with its glory and hope into the vortex of civil war, who went to the front with no selfish end as a moving power: who at the call of her country went to battle with no ambition born of hate or revenge, but who went possessed of an indomitable purpose born of patriotism, developed and fostered by the highest aspirations of the human soul to deliver their beloved country from the hands of the destroyer and saved the temple of liberty, then tottering upon its foundations from the throes of an upheaving political volcano, begotten, by the power of disappointment in political defeat. Your steps may not be so elastic as they have been, and your feet may not with that readiness of twenty-five, it may be thirty years, ago, respond to the command, "forward march," but come what may, the old boys in blue in their future years—and a united nation to-day in thankful prayer, is asking God in his Fatherly care to grant them many—will never become so old or feeble as to be unable to keep step, and with heart and hand beat time to the music of a united and grateful country.

You as veterans crowned by your deeds in the glorious past, and many others, friends and citizens, who hold in dear remembrance the patriotism and valor of the Union soldier, were to-day upon sacred ground, within hallowed precincts, to aid you in your mission of love for the memory and reverence for the last resting place of departed comrades. You placed on the graves of departed relatives and friends, flowers, those beautiful emblems of love and filial care. When the work closed, the satisfying sense to the souls of the living of that longing for remembrance when they have passed beyond the river, and of duty performed to our beloved dead, rested upon us like an angel of hope and peace.

Had I the mental capacity, the command of language, the power and eloquence in its use, necessary to a proper portrayal of so great a theme as must ever be presented by Decoration Day, I would seek no other monument than its lessons taught in grand form of advanced and advancing civilization to perpetuate my name to posterity.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—Latest U. S. Gov't Report.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

From the wall of China to the confines of Siberia, from the Caspian sea to the surf-beaten shores of the Atlantic ocean, Asia and Europe have been deluged in blood and the lives of tens of thousands of thousands of men, have been cut short in battle upon tens of thousands of battle fields whose bodies were doomed to decay without receiving from friend or foe a semblance of burial. To-day and in America we are the soldier cover with filial hand the grave of a fellow comrade with flowers, while tens of thousands of loving hands and tearful eyes are this day, all over the land, engaged in the exalted and exalting work of love messengers with greetings from America to the civilized and enlightened of the world, bearing evidence of the highest civilization attained by man.

From Africa to the farthest India, from Egypt to the ice-bound shores of an Arctic sea, from a time beyond, but how far beyond the dawn of history we have no means of knowing, war, with its train of desolation and misery, has, like a primitive ocean, covered the earth, the dry bones of the fallen in battle have covered the valleys, and the dry places have been watered by the blood of the slain. Like a new world, burning, boiling, steaming, exploding and cooling, has been the human race in their wars of upheaval and destruction, a fitting antitype of a new world. As the destroyer of human life and human happiness came sweeping down the ages, the nearer its approach to modern times, the more appalling it became. In its train, in the light of history, may be seen the innocent and the guilty, the babe in its mother's arms, the aged matron and sire, whose faces are "furrowed o'er with years," the high, the low, the young and the middle aged. Neither age, sex or condition were exempt from the general calamity. A demon in human form, whose armies had triumphed, gathered the remnant of a captured people to honor by their presence and chains a god, but deified and worshipped as a man. Slavery in its worst forms was the fate of the vanquished. Humanity was hushed in silence, and an objector would pay the penalty of his temerity with his life. [Such are some of the miseries of war before the revival of letters in comparatively modern times. A war to emancipate or to elevate man, or to ameliorate the condition of any, is not in the catalogue. A war where the emancipation of any was a result, is unknown. War was made to subdue and enslave. A history of its wars is a history of the world.]

Napoleon I sought the honors of an Alexander, and the distinction of a Caesar; he failed to receive either, and died a prisoner at St. Helena. Men have changed, and have become stronger by the change, in intellectual and moral force, and the world has taken many steps forward and upward. The power of knowledge among the people is everywhere developing to their advantage, and they rule. The autocrat of all the Russias is a prisoner and a slave in the land he tries to rule, and Siberia in the near future, will no more receive his enemies, or those of his successors.

The Great Republic has done and is doing work in the world hitherto unknown. This work is two-fold, exemplary and aggressive; Our genius and example in self-government and the rapid development of our material interests and resources is a theme for the world. Our aggressive work is more especially directed in religious and moral channels. We are spending millions of dollars annually for the upbuilding of a higher and better civilization in the world. Japan, China, India and darkest Africa is feeling the effect of our aggressive work and the dawn of a liberty, that passeth all understanding, is upon the people in these lands. As a sequence of the liberty that drives from the soul all superstition and idolatry, there will follow the power and fact of self-government. Our example and moral power are more than the strength of many armies.

In all the ages preceding our civil war not a slave, as a direct result of war, had been set free. It remained for America to make the grand stride to the advance line of a better humanity and a higher civilization. The causes and effects that led to this most marked and direct advance in the cause of human and individual liberty in the freedom of the colored man, except as a matter of history, is immaterial. Men and nations have made claim to philanthropy when selfishness and gain moved them to action. But the Union soldier, who fought for the liberty that had become and was a part of himself, with his mind's eye upon the star of his country, enshrined in the ever green foliage of truth and good will to men, could move only in line of the disinterested feeling of a philanthropist, seeking the greatest good by the sacrifice he made. That sacrifice, much as it is now prized by a lover of his whole country, will, in succeeding centuries, be better understood and more highly appreciated by a more enlightened and higher humanity than it is now.

It will be a theme of orators in their efforts to bring their hearers to a just sense of their duty to God and their fellow men. It will be as fire in the nursery song of mothers, full of love for their children and their country, as they direct the budding thoughts of their sons to unselfish and heroic deeds for humanity and their country. It will be written and proclaimed the initial step to the millennium when men will study war no more.

When the valor of the Union soldier boy shall become a legend more than a fact with young men, and the mist of deifying years rises upon the vision of the old soldier; when his memory will be all there is remaining of the Grand Army of the Republic; when children's children will recount the valiant deeds of great grandfathers to their posterity, then will the glorious deeds of the Grand Army give forth their latest power. When each succeeding year in the order of time has rolled away, and the old boys in blue are laid at rest under the old flag, each star upon its blue field will be as a mighty sun to light them on to glory.

Rev. T. F. Bradshaw will preach in Verdi this (Sunday) evening at half past seven. A cordial invitation to all.

RENO SCHOOL CENSUS.

What the Marshal's Report Shows.

School Census Marshal B. E. Hunter completed his work yesterday. His returns show that there are 1,254 children under 21 years of age in Reno School District No. 10, of whom 905 are between the ages of 6 and 18 years, an increase of 101, in the census year just ended. Of the children between 6 and 18, 480 are boys and 425 girls. The number of children reported as attending public schools is 595; attending private schools, 20; not attending any school, 280. The number of white children under 21 years of age is 1,241; negro children 7 and Mongolian children 6. Of the whole number of children under 21 years of age, 877 were born in Nevada, 323 in other States or Territories and 54 in foreign countries.

New Uses for an Old Material.

Peat, used for fuel from the earliest times, and long known to be of great value as a fertilizer, now finds so many other applications that its preparation has developed into an industry. Peat powder is serviceable, not only about stables but elsewhere, on account of its absorbent and somewhat antiseptic properties and low cost. A French surgeon introduced this powder, treated with antiseptic solutions and contained in a cloth bag, as a dressing for wounds. The idea, said to be a very old one among the working people of some places, was improved upon by another medical man of Paris, Dr. Redon, who made a soft and pliable wadding of peat. Other dressings have since crowded these out of hospitals, though the peat applications are coming into use and gaining in favor among veterinary surgeons. Dr. Redon's wadding has yielded important results by leading to many efforts to produce woven fabrics, so that peat is now made into mattresses, coverings, carpets, etc., which are esteemed on account of their power of absorption.—Iron.
